Heinrich-Böll-Schule

There are no parent-teacher relationships without pupils

Open lessons - Why?

More transparency about what teachers and children are doing together

Having inspiring experiences together with families

Learning from each other

How are teachers communicating with my child?
How are parents acting with my pupil?

Designing school as a living space, which is included into family life

Presuming thoughts – Organisation frame

not to long, not to short

-> decision: not more than 90 minutes

right point in time:

What's about working parents? What's about additional workload for teachers?

-> decision: taking place during normal school day in the afternoon,
teachers make an early announcement for better family planning

Planning work should not be distinctly more than the planning of a normal lesson

Presuming thoughts - Contents

Activities which support emotional involvement of all participants

parents must be needed for the activity

„living the community“

Activities with a low demand profile

low inhibition threshold

no chance of failure

Definitely no performance, but common activities!

Ideas for open lessons

- easy cooking, bakery (and having a snack)
- motion (parachute games, motion parcours, ...)
- handy craft (doing massage balls) with massage or a ball-parcours
- music (drumming, body percussion or sound story with instruments)
- gardening
- ...

We will do it in future
and find an alternative idea for presence

But...

Pandamic times didn't allow to bring parents as groups into school! ☹️

The school festival in May

Traditional festival for the whole family
Completely unloaded by daily problems

We will invite parents, teachers and children to craft massage balls with each other and manage a ball parcours tied together.

The craft work is not possible to be managed alone.

The parcours needs cooperation and communication.

We will show photos on the blog later on.

AND we invite you to do the workshop now and improve your European teacher-teacher-relationships 😊.
